Total Fabrication Training Details

Total Fabrication Training is the most comprehensive training program available for the quartz and natural stone industry and is endorsed by leading manufacturers of these products.

Total Fabrication Training adds to the craftsmanship of the quartz and stone fabricator by presenting and practicing the best fabrication techniques available. This course is designed to increase safety, quality, productivity and the utilization of time saving tools and techniques with both the beginning and experienced fabricator in mind.

Total Fabrication Training is taught with a variety of adult learning techniques and presentations. The information is presented in an interactive group discussion format covering theory, best practices and real life experiences. The processes are demonstrated in a classroom and shop environments. Students will apply the process to an actual kitchen countertop and fabricate one with their workstation partner. This process includes templating, material layout, cutting, seaming, bowl mounting, edge treatments, cutouts, basic repairs, overhangs, finishing, and installation.

Anyone wanting to acquire the information on quartz and natural stone fabrication, but who are not interested in performing the training exercises can attend as an observer. This is an excellent opportunity for management, sales, or office staff to learn more specifically about what is entailed in fabrication, so as to be able to accomplish their own tasks more accurately and professionally.

Please note: ISFA has a great financial incentive for companies wanting to send more than one employee! Please see registration form for details.
